Kursleitung

Ulisses Lociks

This course offers an all-encompassing approach to the art of woodcut printmaking. Through hands-on practice and theoretical presentations, students will gain an in-depth understanding of the processes involved in creating woodcuts. This will equip them with the foundational knowledge required to begin and further hone their skills in this technique.

WHAT TO EXPECT

The focus of the course will be largely practical, covering the three core stages of woodcutting: matrix preparation, engraving development, and paper printing. The content covered will include:

■ Matrix Preparation:

- Choice and preparation of the wood matrix (exploring different wood types and block treatment).
- Techniques for transferring a design from paper to wood.
- Choice and maintenance of wood engraving tools.

■ Engraving Development:

- Introduction to essential cutting techniques for relief printmaking and the safety precautions necessary for their execution.
- Application of exercises for the familiarization and improvement of cutting techniques.
- Each student will elaborate and execute a woodcut project

■ Printing:

- Choice of suitable paper types for printing.

- b. Presentation and instructions for use of the tools and materials needed for manual printing.
- c. Execution of a small series of prints of the works developed by the students with information related to the registration and numbering of a limited series.

Upon completing this course, students will have produced their own matrix and a limited series of prints. Additionally, they will have acquired fundamental theoretical and practical knowledge to independently continue their journey in this technique.
