Kursleitung

Ulisses Lociks

Explore the traditional craft of woodcut printmaking this summer. In this focused four-day workshop, you'll learn the fundamental techniques and principles of woodblock printing with professional guidance. Whether you're new to printmaking or wish to expand your skills, this course will guide you in creating your own compelling prints and developing a deeper appreciation for this art form.

What You'll Learn

This summer workshop provides a structured approach to woodcut printmaking, guiding you through the essential stages from initial concept to finished print:

1. Preparing Your Woodblock (Matrix)

The workshop begins with the foundation of your print: the woodblock, or matrix. You will learn about selecting and preparing different types of wood suitable for carving. We will cover effective methods for transferring your design onto the wood surface and discuss the proper choice, use, and maintenance of wood engraving tools.

2. Developing and Carving Your Design

Once your block is prepared, you'll move into the carving process. This stage includes an introduction to essential cutting techniques for relief printmaking, with a strong emphasis on the necessary safety precautions. Through practical exercises, you will become familiar with the tools and refine your cutting skills. Each student will then develop and carve their own woodcut design.

3. Printing Your Edition

The final stage focuses on bringing your carved block to paper. You will explore various paper types suitable for hand-printing and receive instruction on using the tools and materials required for this process. You will then print a small series of your original work, learning about print registration and the conventions of numbering a limited edition.

By the end of this 4-day workshop, you will have carved your own woodcut matrix and printed a limited series of your original work. You'll also gain solid theoretical and practical knowledge to continue exploring and refining your woodcut skills independently.
